Charlotte Public Schools' Kindergarten Prep Camp is in Full Swing

Charlotte Public Schools' Weymouth Child Development Center is going into week five of their ten week Kindergarten Prep Camp program. The program focuses on helping children with the basics that will be needed for the fall when they enter Kindergarten. Not only do they work on the academic topics of letters, numbers, and phonics; but there is a large emphasis on the social, emotional, and logistic pieces of a Kindergartener's day as well. They work on such things as playing in a group, eating meals together, walking down the hall, and sitting at large group time.

There are 12 families currently enrolled in the program, and all of them have great things to say. "I am so happy that my daughter has the opportunity to attend the new Kindergarten Prep Camp! I love that she is getting a head start on things she will be doing in Kindergarten in the fall. They are learning letters, writing, numbers, and a regular routine. I believe any and all help that can be done to get our kids ready to start full day school is extremely important. With everything she is learning this summer, I have no doubt she will be ready for Kindergarten!" said Jaime Stevens, a current parent of the program. With 5 weeks left, there is a lot yet to be done and everyone is excited to see the progress that is being made! And what do the kids have to say? One of the children enrolled, summed it up with this: "I love school camp! My teacher is so nice and I like her car."
