Project Success Students Lend Helping Hand

Charlotte Public Schools prides itself on partnering with the community in a variety of ways. Recently, a community member who was physically unable to move out of their apartment reached out to Charlotte High School and asked for help. Immediately, Nick Boucher (CMS Principal), Karen Anderson (Project Success Teacher), Jeff Bohl (CHS Principal), and Sharee Burdick (CHS Assistant Principal) coordinated a way to have CPS Project Success students meet this need and support this community member.

CPS Project Success is a relatively new program at Charlotte Public Schools. CPS Project Success is an alternative pathway for students to earn a high school diploma which emphasizes career training, real-life experiences, projects, and community engagement. The CPS Project Success students were great! They emptied the apartment in less than an hour. The community member was grateful and happy with their work. This is what Oriole Pride is all about! A big thank you to the following students: Corliss Austin, Brandon Dunn, Angel Foster, Craig Gidner, Jayden Hartig, Gianna Hartley, Kyle Koeppen, Jayce Martinez, Ezra Wells, and Amber Mae Wood. Go Orioles! #OriolePride
